✠ Some Food For Thought

Two men, both seriously ill, occupied the same hospital room. One man was allowed to sit up in his bed for an hour each afternoon to help drain the fluid from his lungs. His bed was next to the room's only window. The other man had to spend all his time flat on his back. The men talked for hours on end. They spoke of their wives and families, their homes, their jobs, their involvement in the military service, where they had been on holiday. Every afternoon, when the man in the bed by the window could sit up, he would pass the time by describing to his roommate all the things he could see outside the window. The man in the other bed began to live for those one hour periods where his world would be broadened and enlivened by all the activity and colour of the world outside. The window overlooked a park with a lovely lake. Ducks and swans played on the water while children sailed their model boats. Young lovers walked arm in arm amidst flowers of every colour and a fine view of the city skyline could be seen in the distance. As the man by the window described all this in exquisite details, the man on the other side of the room would close his eyes and imagine this picturesque scene. Days, weeks and months passed. One morning, the day nurse arrived only to find the lifeless body of the man by the window, who had died peacefully in his sleep. As soon as it seemed appropriate, the other man asked if he could be moved next to the window. The nurse was happy to make the switch, and after making sure he was comfortable, she left him alone. Slowly, painfully, he propped himself up on one elbow to take his first look at the real world outside. He strained to slowly turn to look out the window besides the bed – it faced a blank wall. The man asked the nurse what could have compelled his deceased roommate who had described such wonderful things outside this window. The nurse responded that the man was blind and could not even see the wall. She said, 'Perhaps he just wanted to encourage you.' Epilogue: There is tremendous happiness in making others happy, despite our own situations. Shared grief is half the sorrow, but happiness when shared, is doubled. If you want to feel rich, just count all the things you have that money can't buy. Today is a gift, that is why it is called "The Present".

✠ Success Comes from God's Grace

Christ chose St Peter to be the first pope, to be, as he said in today's Gospel, "the rock" upon which he would build his Church. But this is the same Peter who denied our Lord three times the night Jesus was arrested, before the cock crowed. He betrayed his Lord, Saviour, and friend when being questioned by a mere servant girl. That's hardly the kind of dependability you would expect from a rock. It is said that Peter wept for this sin at least once every day for the rest of his life, until the tears wore two pale tracks down the skin of his face. Christ chose St Paul to be the Church's first and greatest missionary. And yet, Paul started out as the leader of a violent persecution designed to crush the infant Church soon after Christ's ascension. But Christ chose him to announce the Gospel all over the ancient world, planting Christian communities in dozens of cities for almost thirty years. And he didn't choose Paul because he was such a great public speaker and charismatic leader. He was short, bow-legged, skinny, and had a weak and whiney voice. The Bible tells us that his critics despised him because "His bodily presence is weak, and his speech of no account" (2 Corinthians 10:10). How did these two men, so flawed, so human, become the two unshakable pillars of the Catholic Church? What transformed them into saints, martyrs, and history-makers? God's grace: the same grace that has kept the Church alive and growing for twenty centuries; the same grace we all received at Baptism. On today's Solemnity of St Peter and St Paul, God wants to remind us that our success and fulfilment as Christians depends more on his grace than our efforts. What a relief!

PLEASE REMEMBER IN YOUR PRAYERS THIS WEEK

Remember Pope Francis' Encyclical "Laudato Si" on care for the earth

Pope Francis's groundbreaking encyclical letter on care for creation was a masterpiece. Here are the top five points in what Francis describes as a "dialogue with all people about our common home."

1. Climate change is real, and it's getting worse. Though some politicians in the still argue about the reality of the climate change, Pope Francis doesn't mince words: "Climate change is a global problem with grave implications: environmental, social, economic, political and for the distribution of goods. It represents one of the principal challenges facing humanity in our day."
2. Human beings are a major contributor to climate change. While many agree that climate change is real, some believe that human beings don't contribute to it. The science suggests otherwise, and Pope Francis—a trained chemist—says human beings do have an effect on the Earth: "We have come to see ourselves as her lords and masters, entitled to plunder her at will."
3. Climate change disproportionately affects the poor. Climate change's worst impact, Pope Francis says, "will probably be felt by developing countries in coming decades. Many of the poor live in areas particularly affected by phenomena related to warming, and their means of subsistence are largely dependent on natural reserves and eco-systemic services such as agriculture, fishing and forestry." This environmental inequality creates a strange economic phenomenon: Poor countries are often financially indebted to rich countries. The world has what Pope Francis calls a "social debt towards the poor ... because they are denied the right to a life consistent with their inalienable dignity."
4. We can and must make things better. Some of those who study climate change believe this process to be irreversible, too far gone. But Francis—whose first major letter was entitled Joy of the Gospel—says he doesn't believe we should be robbed of hope. "Human beings, while capable of the worst, are also capable of rising above themselves, choosing again what is good, and making a new start".
5. Individuals can help, but politicians must lead the charge. Francis argues that personal responsibility is an important step toward reversing climate change, but that political and structural transformations are needed for lasting change. "Every effort to protect and improve our world entails profound changes in lifestyles, models of production and consumption, and the established structures of power which today govern societies." Some politicians argue that Pope Francis and the Catholic Church should stay out of climate change debates and "leave science to the scientists." But Francis and the church know that protecting creation is first and foremost a moral and religious issue. It's a response to God's ancient request that we preserve, protect, and sustain creation.

Do You Really Have To Be Smart To Be A Lawyer? Recently reported in the Lawyers' Journal, the following are questions actually asked of witnesses by lawyers during trials and, in certain cases, the responses given by insightful witnesses:

Q: "You say the stairs went down to the basement?"

A: "Yes."

Q: "And these stairs, did they go up also?"

Q: "How was your first marriage terminated?"

A: "By death."

Q: "And by who's death was it terminated?"
